Bajah of the Dry Eye Crew and Captain Planet collaborate on "Out of Hand", a song supporting Doctors Without Borders in raising Ebola awareness

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE - In an attempt to raise public awareness that the Ebola epidemic is far from over, and as a tool to raise funds for Doctors Without Borders/MSF (one of the most active organizations working in the field today), Bajah, Captain Planet and Brooklyn Shanti have made the song "Out of Hand" available for download with any charitable contribution made directly to DWB/MSF. Please help put an end to this terrible disease by making a donation today, and spread the word simply by sharing this song with friends.

"Out Of Hand" began as a freestyle/beatbox cipher on the sidewalk in the Lower East Side of Manhattan. Executive producer, Brooklyn Shanti, the "Indian Bambaataa" (Universal Zulu Nation) had brought Sierra Leonean singer/rapper Bajah to a show that DJ/producer Captain Planet was a part of at the Mercury Lounge. All three artists were expressing how badly they wanted to do something to help support the doctors and health workers who continue to put their lives on the line in the fight against Ebola. Inspiration struck, an organic sidewalk freestyle began, and Shanti had the wherewithal to hit record. Not long after, the three started seriously developing the song together, sending audio files back and forth over the internet between Brooklyn and Los Angeles. "Out Of Hand" is the final product of that collaboration.
